Syra Bay | Syros

Dafnni Antonakou, 14/05/2019

Stylish, harmonious, spacious and fullyequipped, the Syra Bay residences are an ideal summer accommodation. Their architectural design is modern and the interior design study combines warm earthy colours with cool blue or green shades

The Syra Bay residential complex is in perfect harmony with the Cycladic landscape in Megas Gialos, in the island of Syros, in Greece. It is located alongside the sandy beach of Megas Gialos and overlooks the magical Aegean Sea. The spaces are distinguished by luminosity, they are oriented towards the view of the sea and at the same time they preserve privacy. Stylish, harmonious, spacious and fullyequipped, the Syra Bay residences are an ideal summer accommodation. Their architectural design is modern and the interior design study combines warm earthy colours with cool blue or green shades. Natural materials such as stone, wood, linen, and metallic touches in black, white or gold, lay the individual spaces. This style of decoration emphasizes on relaxed but also unusual everyday life, through colour contrasts of warm and cool shades. The housing areas share some of the same features, but they are not absolutely similar.

Varied frame sizes with summer-inspired themes and holiday relaxation adorn the lounge areas. Textile colourful sofas, metal armchairs, metal or wooden furniture with colourful dining chairs and fabric carpets, are the details that complement the living areas. The decoration in the bedrooms has corresponding elements but not identical objects, with a general feeling of luxury but in earthlier colours than the living room. Beds without headboard or wooden with sky, metal lamps and wooden or metal bedside tables fill the spaces. Indoor plants are the living elements that are added to the living room to transfer the outside space inside and make it beautiful. All houses have a private balcony with a lounge, dining area and sun loungers or hammocks and plants that decorate the areas.
